

2015 DEUTSCHE BANK CHAMPIONSHIP

In 2015, Rickie Fowler capped off his fantastic year of golf by winning the Deutsche Bank Championship. Fowler had previously won the Players Championship and the Scottish open earlier in the year. In the final round, Fowler sank a long 40-foot putt on 14 to take control over Henrik Stenson who had to settle for a 5 on the par 3 16th hole. Stenson's double bogey was what ultimately made him come in second place for the tournament finishing one back of Fowler who scored (-15).
